and there is another potential ironic twist though their belly's leptin would be screaming to their brain that it is getting too fat, their brain would only be hearing a whisper, and think that they are too skinny to survive a famine non-preference-based tools may be useful, but you will usually need to go further than those to be able to handle the problems economists will tend to care the most about of local officials, aspirants for the different elective positions, tribal leaders, civil society group
